In a distant fishing village, a girl named Hanako was walking along the shore one day when she heard a magical song drifting from the sea. The melody was so beautiful, it pulled her toward it, and she quickened her steps to find where it was coming from.

At last, she saw a giant whale washed up on the beach.
The whale was lying still on the sand.

Hanako, who could speak with all living creatures in nature, began to talk to the whale right away.

"Hello, my name is Hanako. What's yours?" The whale slowly opened its eyes and looked at Hanako. In a deep voice, the whale said, "My name is Ryuichi. I lost my family in the storm and ended up on this shore."

The whale was breathing weakly. "They might still be alive, but there's no way they can hear me from here," Ryuichi said, closing its eyes again.
