Hello! I'm Leo.

I'm a tiny little postman who works inside your brain. You may have never noticed me, but I'm busy every single day. And whenever you learn something new, I spring into action right away!

For example, there's Ali... Just like you, he loves learning new things. Lately, he's been saying he can hear tiny little footsteps inside his head. But sadly, no one believes him.

The truth is... those footsteps are mine!

Surprised? Come a little closer. Let me introduce myself.

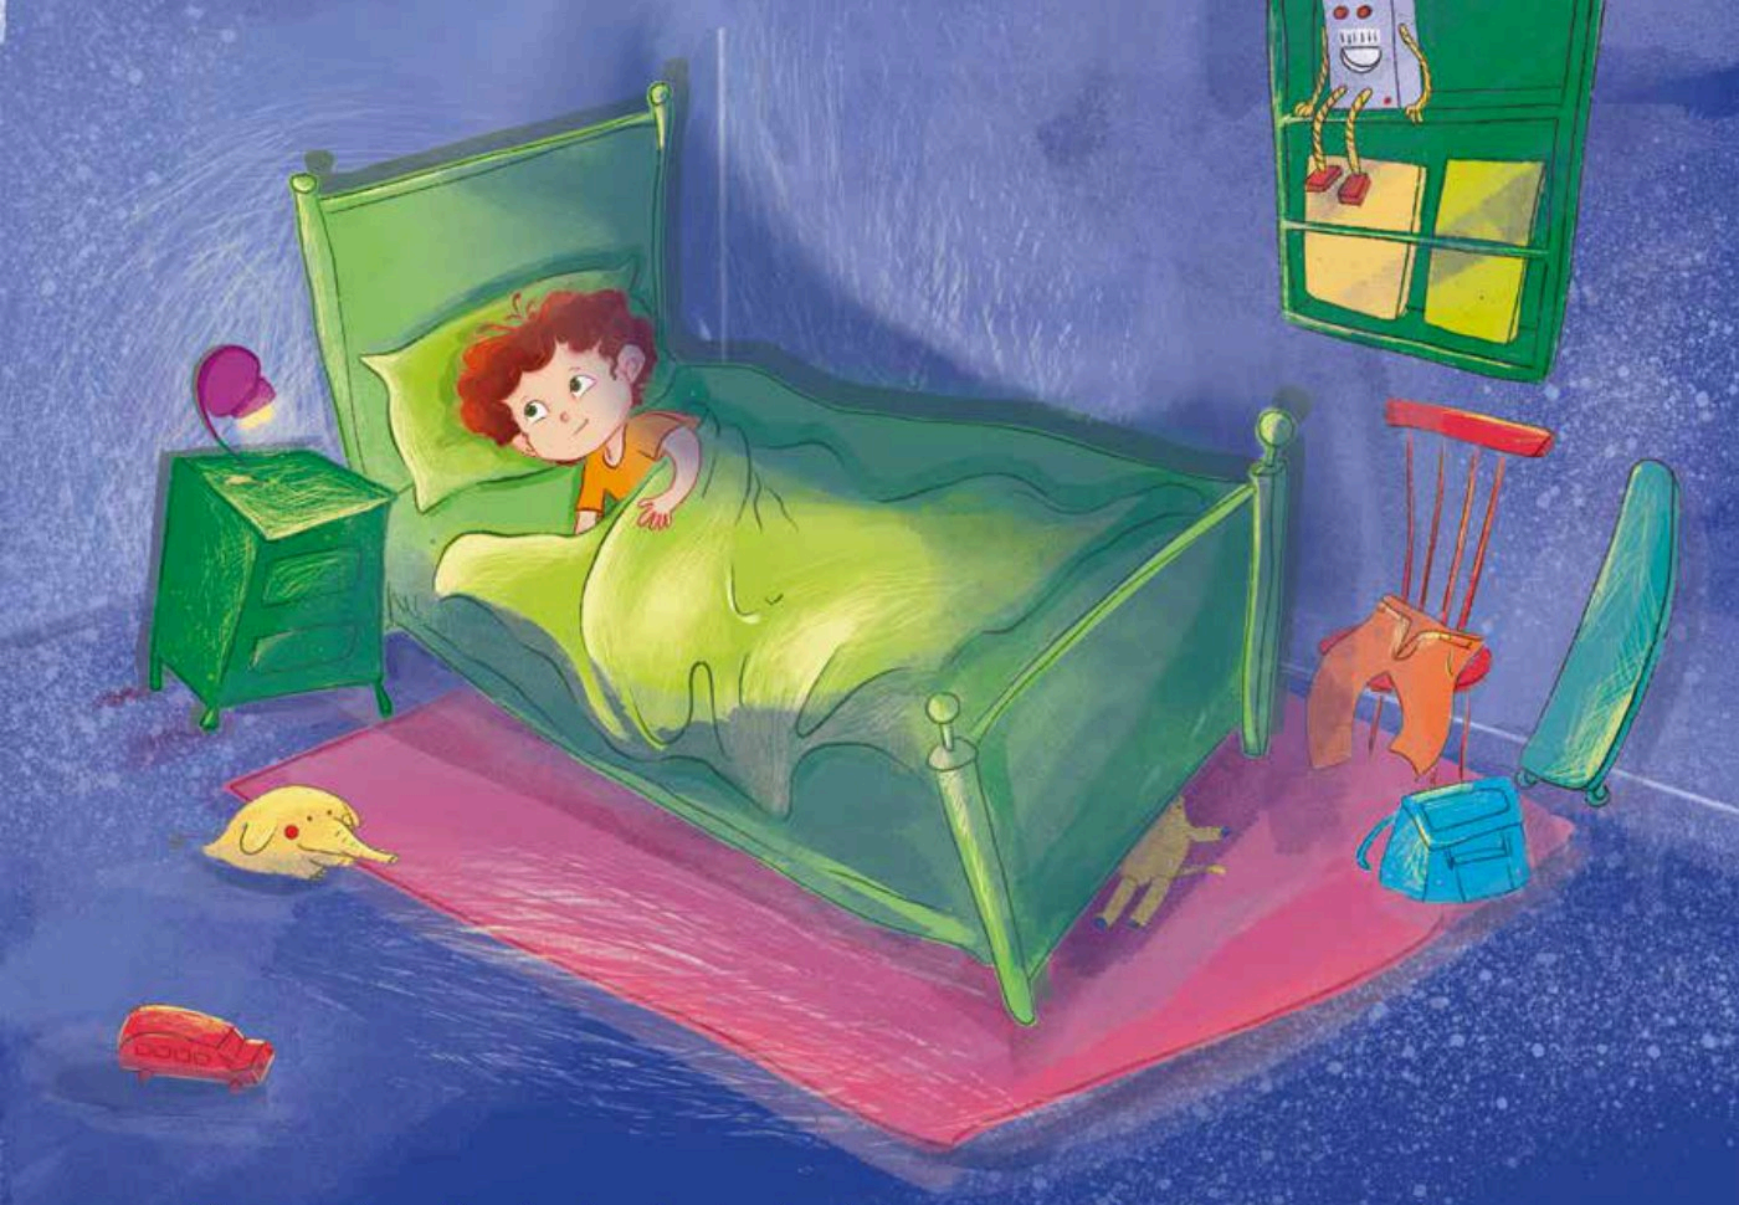

Ali was more excited than ever. The next day, he would be traveling abroad for the very first time. He packed the little suitcase his mother had given him all by himself, carefully choosing each thing he wanted to take and placing it neatly inside.

Ali and his family were going on a one-week vacation. He made sure to pack a few books, too. He had only recently learned to read, and he absolutely loved books. To Ali, every book was a brand-new adventure. And to me, every book was full of brand-new knowledge!

That night, Ali climbed into bed, buzzing with excitement. But falling asleep? That was impossible! He was so busy dreaming about tomorrow that sleep just wouldn't come. Every time his eyelids tried to close, it felt as if something was gently pulling them back open like a curtain. After tossing and turning for what seemed like forever, he drifted off to sleep without even realizing it.
