Ezo and Samba went to the seashore for the summer holiday. They spent the days playing along the shore and swimming. Ezo loved swimming, but Samba didn't like the water, so she waited on the beach.

Samba didn't just sit there while she waited, she sniffed around, digging with her paws to find things that had been forgotten in the sand.

She found a key, a toy, and even a telephone.
When Ezo came out of the water, they played together.
One day, after Ezo finished swimming, they decided to build a sandcastle.

Other children saw Ezo and Samba and came and joined them.

"If we work together, we can make a bigger castle," Ezo said. "Would you like to help?" she asked. Everyone thought it was a great idea.
