Hooray for those who keep their inner child alive!

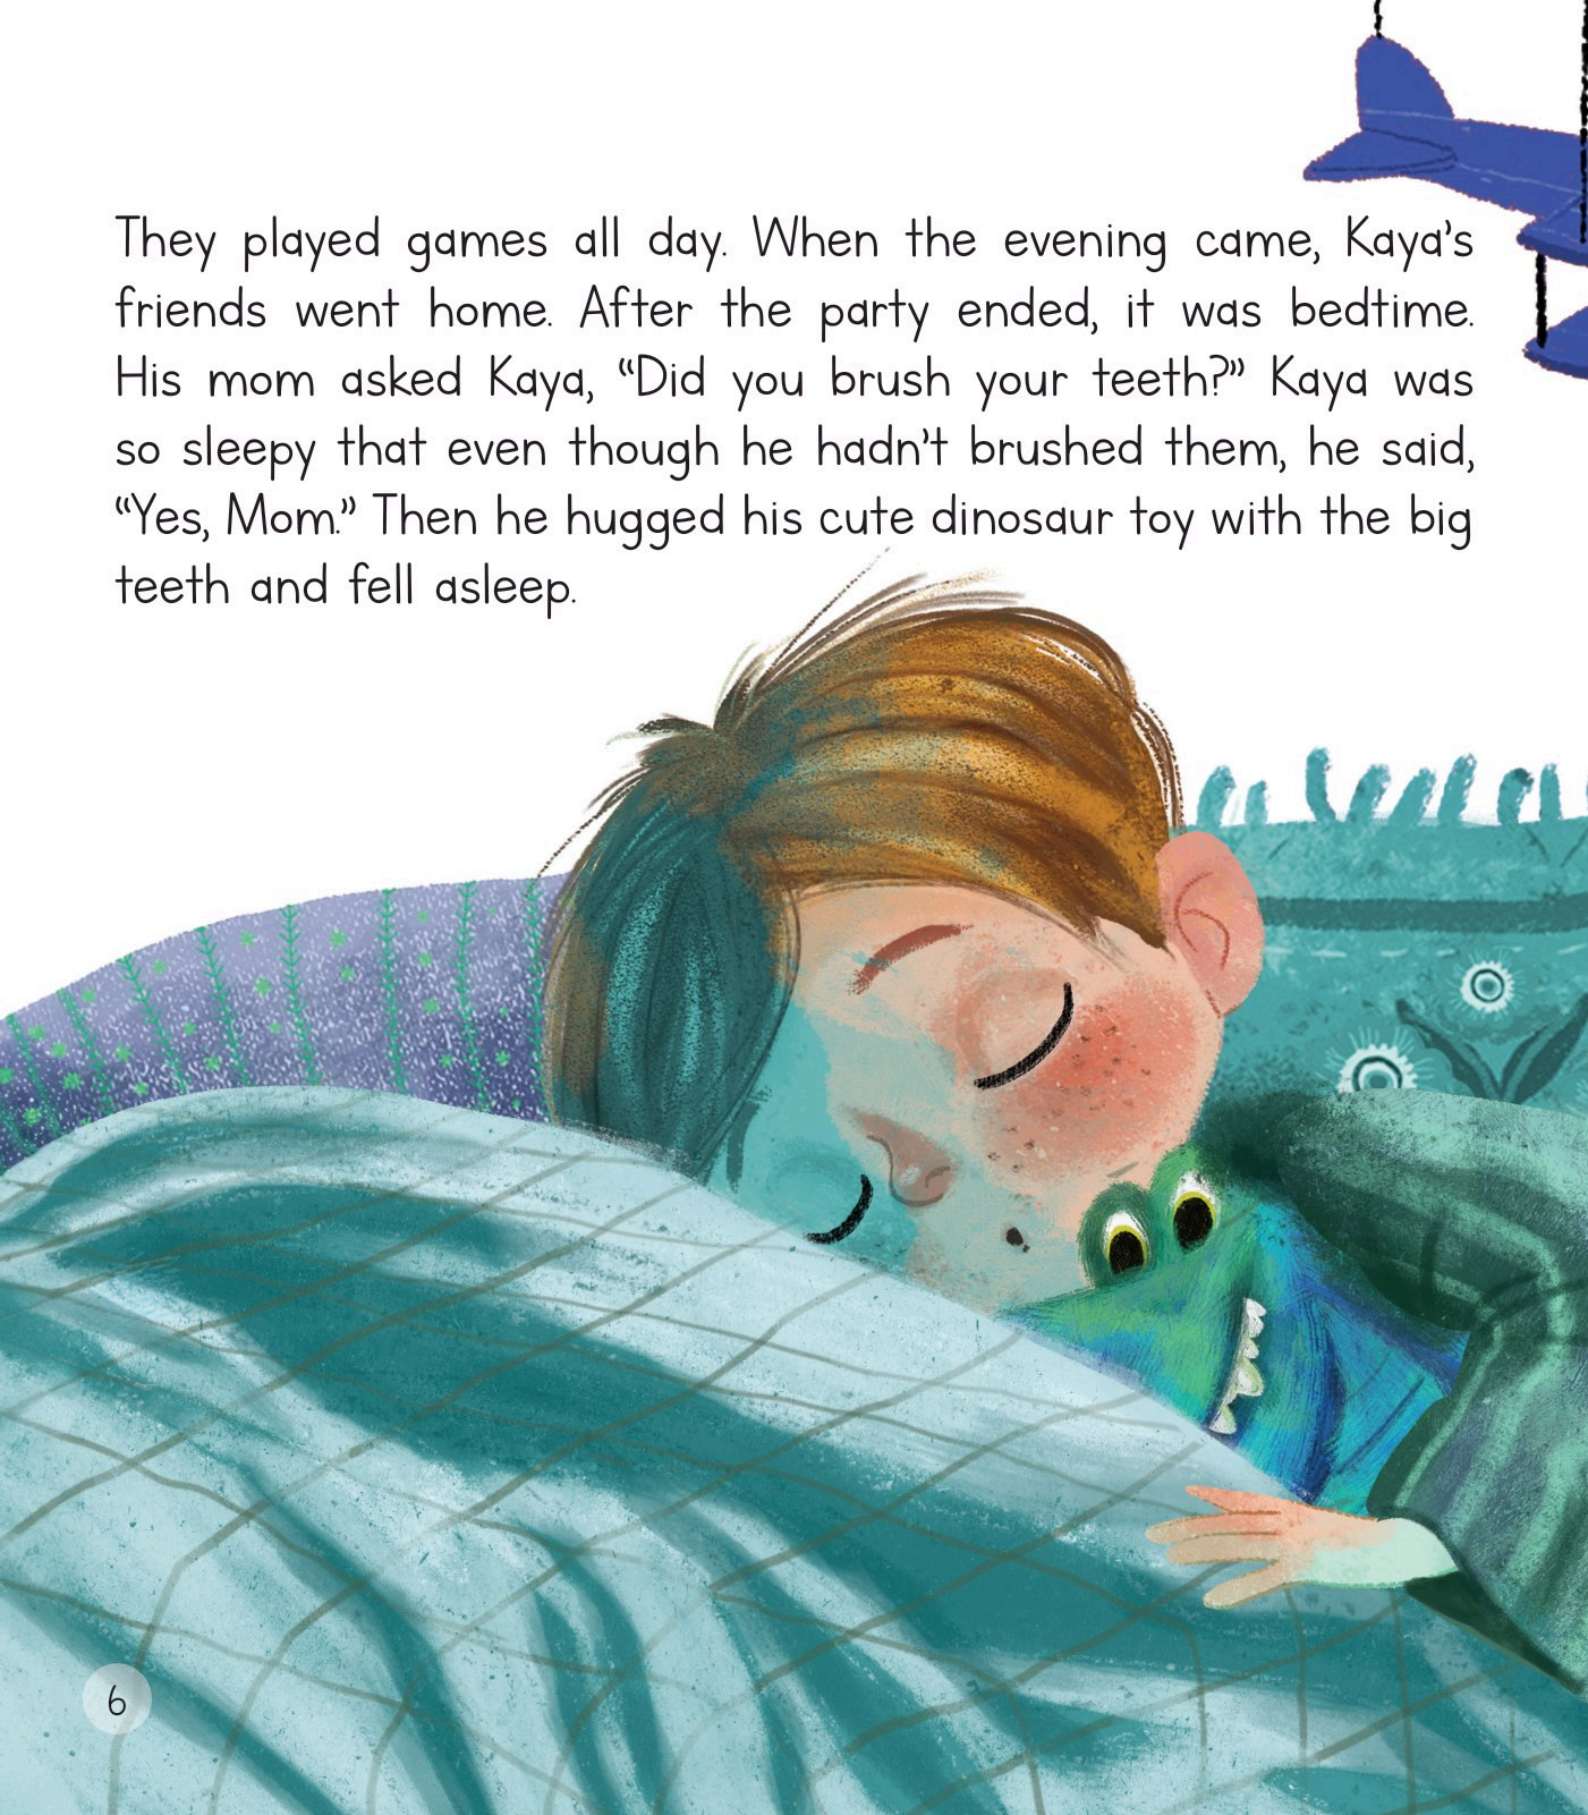

Kaya was very excited for his birthday party. Today, he was turning seven, and his mom had made a huge chocolate for him. She had also baked all kinds of cookies and deserts. All of Kaya's friends had come over to his house. After playing games together, Kaya blew out his candles and ate a big slice of cake.

Everyone shared cookies, candy, and gummies. Kaya was so happy, and he couldn't wait to open his presents. He proudly showed his friends the gift from his dad. A cute dinosaur toy with big, sharp teeth! Once all the presents were opened, they ran outside to play.

They played games all day. When the evening came, Kaya's friends went home. After the party ended, it was bedtime. His mom asked Kaya, "Did you brush your teeth?" Kaya was so sleepy that even though he hadn't brushed them, he said, "Yes, Mom." Then he hugged his cute dinosaur toy with the big teeth and fell asleep.

In his dream, Kaya was back at his party, but something was different. Everything seemed huge! The cake, the cookies even his toy Dino were as big as mountains! And Kaya? He was as small as a thumb! "Hey, I'm down here!" Kaya shouted, but no one could hear him. He climbed up onto the cake, hoping someone would notice.
