Once upon a time, there lived a little girl named Tina. The thing Tina loved most in the whole world was books. Whenever she read, she felt as if she became one of the heroes in the stories.

She would spend hours in her room dressing up like her favorite fairy-tale characters, inventing games, and turning her toys into heroes too; but her own kind of heroes...

Tina even gave herself a special name: The Story Wanderer!

Yes, you heard right: a Story Wanderer!A traveler who once lived in ancient times, who crossed endless mountains, fought waves on vast seas, soared high above the clouds on a bird's wing, and dove deep beneath the earth on an ant's back. She had wandered through so many, so many stories that, as the saying goes, the only thing she hadn't seen was her own back!

For she never forgot what her father once told her: "These stories will guide you, my girl. You can leap into them and find your own path; just like a true Story Wanderer..."

And now, if you're ready, let's begin our tale: Red-Hooded Tina and the Three Wolves. It's a story everyone thinks they know well...But this time, let's hear it from Tina herself.

From inside the house, Tina heard her father's voice calling. He must have been looking for her. After all, she had to take some cake to her grandpa...

"Red, come on, sweetheart! I baked a cake. Will you take some to your grandpa?"

"It's Tina, Dad, Tina! Do I ever call you 'White-Aproned Dad'?"

Her father answered her protest with a big, warm smile. "You're right. All right then, take this cake straight to your grandpa. And don't you dare eat it on the way!"

Red-Hooded Tina loved visiting her grandpa . His house was in the forest, by the lake, surrounded by a wonderful garden. And on her way there, she could meet all sorts of animals and stop to pet them too. Because if there was one thing Tina loved even more than books... it was animals.

As if he could read her mind, her father warned, "I know you, you'll want to stop and pet every animal you see in the forest! Remember, straight to Grandpa's. No dawdling!"

"But animals are so cute! You never let me have a cat at home, so I make do with the ones in the forest. Besides, is there even any forest left, Dad? Tina wasn't wrong, forests were becoming fewer and fewer...
